Public International Law

Public international law is essential for comprehending both national and international issues, including diplomatic relations, international conflicts, trade, and human rights. This cutting-edge seminar aims to familiarise you with the fundamental concepts of public international law, covering a broad spectrum of topics from the subjects and sources of law to the intricate interplay between national and international law. Participants will benefit from top-tier theoretical instruction and practical workshops.

Designed for senior civil servants, directors, and managers of public bodies, this course provides a unique opportunity to deepen their understanding of international regulatory frameworks and their influence on domestic law. Acquiring comprehensive knowledge of these international legal dynamics enables managers to operate with insight in a globalized context, ensuring that their actions and decisions align with international standards and effectively contribute to the State's objectives and responsibilities.
